A note from the CEO on intellectual property . . .

Based on the founder's years of advanced education and training in the art & science of systems engineering much of our intellectual property is system-based for technology and market areas that spawn entirely new ecosystems & technology platforms, while having a singular focus on revenue generation.

IPG's proprietary products & services across each of our six market verticals and 17 different product lines are the result of the founder's unique education, professional experience, and a deep understanding of the underlying building blocks.

An important aspect of our technology innovation process is careful consideration, research, and analysis at the time of conception, of the marketplace issues, technology deployment issues, and providing multiple valuable propositions that stand the test of time.

As one example, secure mobile payment technology was engineered as an elegant solution to fundamentally improve the security and simplicity of secure mobile payment transactions, without altering existing payment infrastructure; resulting in proprietary innovations current mobile payment industry competitors simply can't match.

IPG has a very large portfolio of patents, patent pending applications, trademarks and trademark applications protecting our intellectual property; a large percentage of our IP in important technology markets is foreign-protected.
